REVIEW & OUTLOOK

Polio and Rotary

Today marks the 50th anniversary of the Salk polio vaccine. Poliomyelitis, also known as infantile paralysis, used to be one of childhood's most feared diseases. A few years after Dr. Jonas Salk announced his vaccine on April 12, 1955, nearly every child in the U.S. was protected. Today polio has disappeared from the Americas, Europe and the Western Pacific and is nearly gone from the rest of the world.

A too-little known part of the story played by Rotary, the international men's club, which 20 years ago set the goal of wiping out the disease. It stood that medical breakthrough was less unless people aren't able to get their children and efficient delivery system to get the vaccine to them. Rotary mobilized its members in 30,100 countries to make it happen.

In 1985, when Rotary launched its eradication program, there were an estimated 350,000 new cases of polio in 125 countries. Last year,

1,263 cases were reported. More than one million Rotary members have volunteered their time or donated money to immunize two billion children in 122 countries. In 1988, Rotary money and its example were the catalyst for a global eradication drive joined by the World Health Organization, Unicef and the U.S. Centers for Disease Control. In 2000 Rotary teamed with the United Nations Foundation to raise more money for the program. The world is certified as polio-free—Rotary will have contributed to the eradication effort.

Our acquaintance calls Rotary a successful private health organization. A vaccine-company CEO recently told us that the work of Rotary and the United Nations Foundation, both private organizations, is more effective than any government.

Promoting vaccines to save lives. It's become fashionable in some quarters to deride civic volunteerism, but Rotary's unsung polio effort deserves the Nobel Peace Prize.

Rotary's polio effort deserves the Nobel Peace Prize.
